

Finding the Right Moving companies

It is very important to find good moving companies if you are moving to your new home or office. There are actually thousands of moving companies you can choose from but you would want to select from reputable ones if you do not want your move to be expensive and taxing. When you move remember that you have to move with a company you can trust because you are moving your valued possessions. Fly by night moving companies are out there so they are the ones you must stay away from. Do not worry, though. There are also moving companies that provide excellent service and fare rates, as there are also those that do nothing but scam their customers. So how do you go about finding the right moving companies?

Well the first thing that you should do is to do a little research. See if you can find professional moving companies by checking out the internet and your local listings. In your research check the feedback from customers and also the ratings of the moving companies. Also it would be good if the moving companies have long track record. This means that they have been in service long enough to satisfy customers. Now from your research, select at least five moving companies. Getting their DOT and MC license number, local and toll free numbers and company address is also important. A sign that they are not to be trusted is dubious information. Asking for references and contacting them is also important in your research. Now choose the best five moving companies from your list and forget about their rates at this time.

Second, call the moving companies and ask how they are going to go about estimates. Ask if they will do an in home estimate. Then ask if they will do the move or if they subcontract the job. If they depend on subcontracting, then you should think twice about the safety of your things and the reliability of their service. Moving companies that do the moving themselves is what is better for you to find. Now if they have local office you should check it out. This way you can see their storage facilities and their trucks. You can then fairly assess the company with the safety of their storage facilities and the quality of their trucks. For example, moving companies that do not have permanent company name and logo on their trucks is certainly what you do not want.

Third, compare the quotes from the different moving companies. Because of the services they offer some moving companies will have higher rates than others. So do not just look at the total amount of what the move will cost you but check the other services, such as the amount insured and the valuation of your things. Although not in your budget, these can make a difference in the overall security and safety of your belongings. Although moving is really quite expensive, do not be swayed by moving companies that offer unreasonably cheap rates. One indication that they are not your typical professional movers is unreasonably cheap rate.

Finally choose the one that you think is best among your five moving companies. Now call the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration, once you have chosen the one you think is best, and ask about how the company is faring in terms of complaints. You can now hire this company, given good feedback.

About the Author

For more about moving company, stop by crosscountrymovingcompanies.net.

Source: <http://ArticleMe4.com>