Art of Bridal shower invitations The day before every wedding is the bridal shower and it is more or less the second most important event in any womans life after the wedding itself. If not anything, it is an excuse for the girls to gather together and have a fun evening and take some steam of right before the wedding and keep everyone in a fun mood. And of course, there are gifts to be opened. Depending on the budget, the affair may be a grand one or a low key event. Everything depends on the maid of honor and her levels of creativity.

The mood, theme and guest list for the bridal shower is to be decided upon by the organizers before the invitations are sent out. Flowers need to be ordered, music has to be chosen and favors selected and that by no means is an easy task. Mostly, bridal shower ideas will comprise a theme that will be carried through from the venue to the food and everything in between. They are commonly held as an afternoon tea on a weekend and the guests will dress up for the special occasion, as though it were a rehearsal for the wedding itself. The general mood of the shower should correspond with the brides personality and interests and only the closest person can get it right.

As for the perfect timing to send out the invitations, this can be tricky because if you send invitations out too late, your guests might already have other plans, while if you send them out too far in advance, you run the risk of guests forgetting about the Shower altogether. Keeping all that in mind, its good timing to send the invitations 2 to 3 weeks in advance Youll give guests time to clear their schedules and find that perfect gift and its not so far in advance that they will forget about the Shower.

The prevailing rules of etiquette dictate that every adult be sent an individual invitation, however, in the event of a couple shower, the couple ought to be sent one common invitation. Two females living in one residence get an invitation each. If the bride is having another shower, try to stay away from inviting the same guests. However, if it is inevitable, it is prudent to inform the guests that they should pass on bringing another gift to the shower and that their company would do.

For the invitation, go with the theme of the bridal shower. You can purchase online, use the ideas and get a few of the guests together to make your own, or get some ideas before heading out to the store.

All this done and crossed off your checklist, you are all set to make it a memorable evening.
